

WORLD

LISTEN & FOLLOW

How Russia's war in Ukraine is changing the world's oil markets

February 28, 2023 · 5:28 PM ET
Heard on All Things Considered

Jackie Northam

3-Minute Listen

+ PLAYLIST

Russia's war in Ukraine is causing a profound and permanent shift in the world's oil markets, creating new geopolitical alliances. Analysts say it's comparable to the 1970s Arab oil embargo.

Sponsor Message

Searching For Vegas Hotels? - Guest Services Available

Ad www.mgmresorts.com

Transcript

ARI SHAPIRO, HOST:

Russia's war in Ukraine has implications far beyond the battlefield, including energy. The flow of oil, natural gas and refined products like diesel has been upended, leading to one of the largest shifts in the global energy market in decades. NPR's Jackie Northam reports.

JACKIE NORTHAM, BYLINE: Any American around at the time will likely remember the 1973 oil embargo. That's when Arab oil producers cut exports to the U.S. and other nations in retaliation for support of Israel during the Yom Kippur War. Gas stations ran dry. Prices skyrocketed. And the U.S. economy flattened. It also created a profound and permanent shift in energy markets as nations looked for new suppliers beyond the Middle East. Now, Russia's invasion of Ukraine has created another major shift in energy.

DAVID GOLDWYN: This really is the biggest transformation in the energy markets probably since 1973.

NORTHAM: David Goldwyn is with the energy advisory firm Goldwyn Global Strategies. He says these energy shifts aren't just about oil.

GOLDWYN: The Russian invasion of Ukraine has permanently redirected the flows of natural gas, crude oil and refined products.

NORTHAM: What jolted the global energy network was Russian President Vladimir Putin's decision to weaponize energy in retaliation for Europe's support of sanctions. Daniel Yergin is an energy specialist at S&P Global and author of the book "The New Map: Energy, Climate, And The Clash Of Nations." He says before the Ukraine war, Russia and Europe were highly integrated when it came to energy.

DANIEL YERGIN: That's over. Putin's really stopped the flow of most natural gas to Europe. And Europe has slammed the door on Russian oil and simply will not take anymore. And that has forced Russian oil into other markets and at a much lower price, principally India and China.

NORTHAM: Europe used to rely heavily on Russia for refined oil products, such as diesel. Now it's looking to India and China, which have become strategic suppliers of the commodities, says Karen Young with Columbia University's Center on Global Energy Policy.

KAREN YOUNG: The Indians are very, very happy to buy cheaper Russian oil, as have been the Chinese. They can take that Russian oil and turn it into other petroleum products and sell them and do it at quite a nice profit.

NORTHAM: Relying on China for its refining needs could leave Europe dependent on the Asian nation. But Young says sending Russian oil to Asian nations has also had a knock-on effect for other countries, including Saudi Arabia.

YOUNG: There are kind of, you know, long-standing customer relationships between the Gulf states and Asian customers. And so cheaper Russian product is a threat to those relationships.

NORTHAM: And it could give Saudi Arabia more leverage over Europe. David Goldwyn says Europe is looking to other Mideast countries for oil and places like Qatar and Algeria for natural gas. New fields are coming online in Africa. And Goldwyn says the U.S. has also become a critical supplier.

GOLDWYN: Two years ago, most U.S. oil was headed to Asia. Now it's headed to Europe. Two years ago, most U.S. liquefied natural gas was headed to Asia as well. Last year, Europe was the top destination. So the U.S. becomes a much more important strategic player.

NORTHAM: The U.S. may not feel the shock of the 1970s, but it's still vulnerable to sharp rises in the price of oil, which could happen again once China's economy starts to pick up steam. Most analysts agree one thing is certain - Russia's days as an energy superpower are likely over. Jackie Northam, NPR News.

Copyright © 2023 NPR. All rights reserved. Visit our website terms of use and permissions pages at www.npr.org for further information.

NPR transcripts are created on a rush deadline by an NPR contractor. This text may not be in its final form and may be updated or revised in the future. Accuracy and availability may vary. The authoritative record of NPR's programming is the audio record.

More Stories From NPR

WORLD Latest on Ukraine: Russia will mark WWII Victory Day, as Ukraine war rolls on (May 8)
BOOK REVIEWS 'Red Memory' aims to profile people shaped by China's Cultural Revolution
ASIA Leaders from Japan and South Korea vow better ties following summit
LATIN AMERICA Dozens are reported dead from a fire deep in a gold mine in Peru
WORLD Out-of-control wildfires cause evacuations in western Canada
WORLD After years of isolation, Bashar al-Assad's Syria is allowed back in the Arab League

Popular on NPR.org

NATIONAL He helped craft the 'bounty hunter' abortion law in Texas. He's just getting started
RACE A California panel has called for billions in reparations for descendants of slaves
ANIMALS String of horse deaths before the Kentucky Derby reignites scrutiny about the sport
NATIONAL Authorities identify the shooter who opened fire at a Texas outlet mall on Saturday
TECHNOLOGY People are trying to claim real videos are deepfakes. The courts are not amused
HEALTH Does sex get better with age? This senior sex therapist thinks so

NPR Editors' Picks

CULTURE Here are the winners of the 2023 Pulitzer Prizes
NATIONAL The Brownsville driver who hit a crowd of asylum-seekers is charged with manslaughter
YOUR HEALTH Do you freeze up in front of your doctor? Here's how to talk to your physician
HEALTH Cyberattacks on health care are increasing. Inside one hospital's fight to recover
SPORTS Golf allows me to pursue perfection, all while building a community
CULTURE And the winner is: MTV Movie & TV Awards relies on old clips as it names its winners

READ & LISTEN	CONNECT	ABOUT NPR	GET INVOLVED
Home	Newsletters	Overview	Support Public Radio
News	Facebook	Diversity	Sponsor NPR
Culture	Instagram	Accessibility	NPR Careers
Music	Press	Ethics	NPR Shop
Podcasts & Shows	Contact & Help	Finances	NPR Events
		Public Editor	NPR Extra
		Corrections

Saks

NEW ARRIVALS

SHOP NOW

40%

50%

60%

Sponsor Message

Become an NPR sponsor